As part of my accounting college program, I thought it was just a basic class to introduce things in accounting. Little did I know the greatest of this book, it is a real must have and follow through. It actually show from the start the importance of being financially focus in every aspect of our personal life. We all think we do very well in handling our money just because we are working and putting money in our checking account, and suddenly the money goes faster than we make it. It shows how most of our personal life is making financial decisions with present and future consequences, since setting up goals, to handle our cash, saving for our retirement, short and long term goals, such as buying a car, a house, vacation, investments and so forth. Also, how to handle our taxes, understanding consumer credit, and all types of insurance. The beauty of this is understanding when and how to buy a car, or a house, and understanding all the steps all these decisions entails. Without these important tools we can easily see ourselves going bankrupt and not realizing it why. It has much more than I thought. As I said, a must have.

Had to get this book for a college class. It was really easy to read and follow.

Rented this book and it did not come with the code for the online materials... I didn't rent this book so I could still go on to pay the $130 for the online materials.. What a waste of time and money.
