Kenneth L. Carder serves on the faculty of The Divinity School, Duke University in Durham, North Carolina. Prior to his teaching ministry, Dr. Carder served as a United Methodist bishop in Tennessee and Mississippi.

Living Our Beliefs formed the basis for a United Methodist Lay Servant class which was most informative. Helped a seasoned Methodist learn more about her church, its history and beliefs and will help in developing a class for new and older members of our congregation. .

Carder's 2009 book about Methodist beliefs is engaging and useful. Building chapter-by-chapter he educates the reader in the most critical elements of John Wesley's ideals, then very clearly explains how those ideals should be put to use in today's world. For the academic reader, each chapter also presents a bibliography of resources. For a study group, each chapter presents a short list of questions which can form the basis of reflection and interesting discussions.

If your United Methodist and also going before the Board of Ordained Ministry...Get this book. Read it. Read it again...Re-write your questions for the board. Then Read it again.

If you are studying for the ministry, this is a good book.

It was a book I had to have for a seminary class I was taking online. It fit the course appropriately. I ordered it from because it was on back order at my seminary book store.

Really gives nice insight into Methodism. Nice urging to get involved and help others. Well written with questions for consideration at the end of each chapter. Nice for a group study!

Thank you

After being a Methodist for 14 years I decided to take a Certified Lay Minister course. This has helped me to understand what we are for and I will use this knowledge when preparing sermons.
